

Economist (CR601)

(Director/Manager/Consultant level)

Salary: Negotiable | London

Flint provides advice to business and other organisations, drawing on our distinctive blend of expertise and experience. We work on political, policy, competition and regulatory issues at the point where government and business meet, offering an authoritative perspective on both. We are senior practitioners and offer our clients exceptional, high-quality advice that affects their bottom-line. We are based in central London, with an office in Brussels and a presence in other major European capitals.

As we enter our fourth year, we want to expand our Competition & Regulation practice, to drive the breadth and depth of our business.

What does the role involve?

In Flint's Competition & Regulation practice we use our experience and technical knowledge from senior levels - in business, regulatory and competition authorities - to support our UK and international clients on a range of complex strategic issues. For example:

- We develop compelling regulatory strategies that are closely tied to commercial objectives, by combining rigorous economic advice with a profound understanding of political reality and how decisions are made.
- We act as a 'critical friend', challenging internal thinking in a constructive way.
- We prepare and review formal submissions for governments, regulators and competition authorities.
- We undertake in-depth economic analysis to develop core arguments, design effective remedies and establish a sound evidence base.
- We help to develop constructive relationships with key decision-makers in regulatory agencies and governments, and with other significant stakeholders.

Essential skills

We are currently seeking highly motivated economists at a range of different levels to join our London team. At a minimum you will have three years' experience, but more senior candidates may have considerably more.

Educated to at least degree level in economics or a related discipline, you will possess:

- First class understanding of economic principles and the ability to apply those in a practical way to real world problems – in particular, you will have experience of applying regulatory and/or competition economics in a wider policy-making setting.
- Excellent analytical, quantitative, research and problem-solving skills with the ability to draw out the implications of complex evidence and analysis to give clear strategy and policy advice.
- Outstanding written communication skills, with a proven ability to draft clear documents for internal and external audiences with varying degrees of economic knowledge. Your writing will be focused and concise.
- Outstanding oral communication skills, especially in communicating complex issues to non-specialists.
- Strong organisational skills including the ability to prioritise, plan and schedule complex tasks proactively. You will be comfortable working calmly under pressure and to tight deadlines.
- Strong interpersonal skills, bringing a flexible approach and the ability to work well across teams, both with internal colleagues and external clients.
- Depending on level of seniority, you will have a strong understanding of both public and private sectors.

Our values

Flint's clients expect the highest quality advice, delivered in a way that is timely and actionable. Within Flint, we expect all of our colleagues to reflect our values:

- We deliver excellent work for our clients.
- We are commercial and entrepreneurial.
- We are collaborative and agile.

What we offer

We offer a dynamic, challenging and intellectually stimulating work environment, with the opportunity to make a real impact on clients and their business. We put a high value on working as one team. We are small enough to work flexibly and informally, yet established enough to offer progression for the right people.

We offer a competitive reward package and the opportunity to earn a significant bonus related to business success and individual performance.

To apply

Please write to careers@flint-global.com with a CV and a brief covering letter explaining your qualifications for the role. Please include the reference number (CR601) in the subject line of your email.
